In the aftermath of a mass casualty incident (MCI), the workers' compensation industry is reminded of the importance of preparation. To minimize exposure, it is vital for employers and carriers to proactively develop a disaster response recovery plan (DRP), and have supplemental clinical resources at the ready to assist all stakeholders in navigating the medical system.

In this recent WC Magazine article, Genexâ $\in$ <sup>TM</sup>s Laney Bond offers a framework to help facilitate improved results from the workersâ $\in$ <sup>TM</sup> compensation perspective.
